

Three Customers Hide in Plain Sight

A data-led communication strategy for the marketing team

Two years of behavior across 2,231 customers were analyzed to move beyond demographic segmentation. The data tells a clear story: a small but disciplined audience generates most of the revenue, while nearly half of the customer base browses but barely buys. The three personas uncovered define how, where, and in what tone we should be speaking to each.

BROWSE BUT DO NOT BUY

Three truths the data revealed

Each finding reframes a piece of conventional marketing wisdom and points to a specific lever for growth.

01

The Empty-Nest Premium

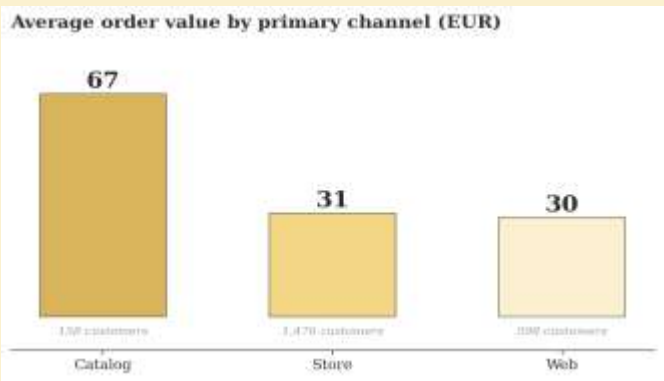

Customers without children at home spend over 4x more than parents with two children — yet over 70% of the base has at least one child at home.

A family-bundle play could lift parent spend with zero new customers.

02

Catalog buyers spend 2x per order

Catalog-first customers are only 7% of the base, yet each order is worth over twice a typical web or store order. The channel self-selects high-value customers for free.

Doubling catalog mailings to look-alikes is our lowest-risk growth lever.

03

Top customers drive most of revenue

Champions and Loyal Customers are 40% of the base but generate 73% of all revenue. The Hibernating quarter brings just 6% — paid media on them rarely pays back.

Concentrate retention budget on the top tier; suppress paid media on Hibernating.

Different people, different conversations

One brand, three voices. The persona dictates channel and tone; the lifecycle stage dictates trigger and offer.

PERSONA	PRIMARY CHANNEL	TONE OF VOICE	LEAD MESSAGE
Premium Empty-Nesters 26% of base · revenue engine	Print catalog + curated email	Aspirational, exclusive, no discount language	First-access launches, sommelier wine picks, butcher's selection
Engaged Family Buyers 27% of base · high frequency	Email + push notifications	Warm, conversational, gently incentivized	Wine-paired bundles to grow basket size, family-meal solutions
Budget-Constrained Browsers 47% of base · low conversion	On-site banners + email; suppress paid media	Practical, value-led, time-boxed	Cart-recovery flows, deal alerts, weekday meal ideas

Three priorities for next quarter

- 01

Launch the Family Sunday bundle
Premium meat + wine + kid-friendly add-ons for Engaged Family Buyers. Closes the Empty-Nest gap.
- 02

Double catalog to Empty-Nesters
Plus verified look-alikes (top-quintile income, no children). Lowest-risk lever in the data.
- 03

Pivot Browsers from paid to on-site
Reallocate paid-media spend into cart recovery, price anchoring, abandoned-cart flows.
